

EXHIBIT A

The image consists of nine horizontal black bars of varying lengths and positions. The first four bars are positioned near the top of the frame, with the fourth one being the longest. The fifth bar is located in the middle-left area. The sixth bar is the longest and spans most of the width of the frame. The seventh bar is positioned in the lower-left area. The eighth bar is near the bottom-left corner. The ninth bar is at the very bottom of the frame.

This image shows a document page where all the text has been obscured by thick black horizontal bars. The bars vary in length, covering entire lines or groups of lines. There is no legible text or other visual information present.

The image consists of a series of horizontal black bars of varying lengths and positions, suggesting redacted text or a heavily redacted document. The bars are arranged vertically, with some shorter bars appearing in groups at the top and others scattered throughout the middle and bottom of the frame.

The image consists of a large, solid black rectangular area at the bottom, which appears to be a redaction. Above this, there are approximately 15-20 shorter, horizontal black bars of varying lengths, also serving as redactions. These shorter bars are distributed unevenly across the upper two-thirds of the page.

The image consists of a vertical column of approximately 20 horizontal black bars. These bars vary in length, creating a visual pattern. Some bars are relatively short, while others are very long, extending almost the full width of the frame. The bars are evenly spaced vertically, suggesting they might be part of a larger document or graphic where the text has been redacted.
